RHEA AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Large and Fine Audience Greets the Fair M'lle Rhes, supported by an excep-tionally fine company, appeared at the Opera House last evening before one of the finest andiences of the season, every eat in the dress circle and parquett seat in the dress circle and parquette being taken before the curtain went up. The play, "Josephine, Empress of the French" is very strongly written; from a literary standpoint it is admirable. Almost every bit of dialogue and every scene pleases and gratifies one's sense of the historical proprieties. It gives Rhea, in the title role, some fine opportunities for a display of her well known dramatic power. She was seen to splendid advantage in the tender and pathetic scenes with Aspotcon. Her costumes are marvels of beauty and magnificence. Mr. William Harris looked the very image of Aspotcon, and did much to make the performance the success it was. The company was evenly balanced, and the costumes were historically correct. Rhea and Mr. Harris were recalled at the end of every act. The eighteenth annual convocation of the Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons, of this State, was held in this city yes-terday at the Masonic headquarters, corner of Main and Twelfth streets. THE STATE RESTED

Yesterday in the Trial of Thomas Miller for Murder,

NOW ON AT MOUNDSVILLE.

A Review of the Testimony in Thus Far in the Case—What the Defense Claims to be Able to Prove—A Peculiar Case,

The trial of Thomas Miller, charged with killing Joseph Morris on the night of April 20, 1888, at or near the saloon kept by one Hurley in the upper section of Benwood, near Boggs' run, sgain en gaged the attention of the Circuit Court for Marshall county, in session at Moundaville, with Judge Paull presiding. Yesterday was the fourth day of the trial and concluded the testimony offered on behalf of the State. The State rested its caseshortly before noon and the defense at once proceeded to introduce its evidence. It is thought the case will be ready for the jury by Thursday morning. The testimony offered by the five processed to them that he did the deed, and some of it came from relatives of the scrussed man, apparently proves that he struck the blow that cost Morris his life; some testified that the accused had confessed to them that he did the deed, The character of some of these witnesses, however, and their manner on the stand, especially when under cross examins.

MARTIN'S FERRY MATTERS. and some of it came from relatives of the scrused man, apparently proves that he struck the blow that cost Morris his life; some testified that the accused had contessed to them that he did the deed. The character of some of these witnesses, however, and their manner on the stand, especially when under cross examination, was not such as to favorably impress the jury. There were numerous contradictions all through the evidence for the State. Some of the witnesses, within a few minutes after having made a statement as being true, would wholly within a few minutes after having made a statement as being true, would wholly deny it, and when pressed on cross examination were completely dumbfounded and could not answer further.

James Hurley, who has taken an active part in the prosecution, was especially unfortunate in his testimony, and on cross examination admitted that he had stated what was not true in his examination in chief. Some of the State's witnesses were examined at Russell Bow's hearing, when he was charged with the MR. KEENE AND HIS COMPANY.

A Western Paper Gives Mr. Frank Hennig a Complimentary Notice.

St. Joseph (Mo.) Delty Hereid.

Louis Xi.—Thomas W. Keene appeared at Tootle's last night in "Louis XI, King of France." It was his first appearance before a St. Joseph audience since he was taken sick in Kansas City two years age, but he has lost none of his genius as a great actor. He has always been popular with the lovers of tragedy here and the large audience accorded him the warmest applause. At the close of the second act he was called before the curtain, and after the fourth he was called back repeatedly. The role of Louis XI is a very trying one, but Mr. Keene is a complete master of the heroic lines and displays his powers as an actor in a splendid manner. George Learock as the Duke de Newsours, is the possessor of a splendid voice, but his acting did not equal that of Mr. Frank Hennig, who played the part of Jacques Coliter, physician to the king. Mr. Hennig has a fine face, his manner is intensely dramatic and some day he will be known as a great tragedian. Mr. Henri de Lussan was the minister to the king, Oliver le Dain, and performed the was taken and proference to the calman was the minister to the king, Oliver le Dain, and performed the was truck twice with a knife.

mony of the defense is that in Jefferson's saloon the Traeday after the Sunday when Morris received the fatal wound, in reply to a remark that it took three of them to do Morris up, Bow said it was a "d-n lie." that no one touched him but himself, and that he had "smacked him twice for nibbing in." The evidence shows that the dead man was struck twice with a knife.

The winesses for the State who claim to have seen Miller strike Morris, say it occurred out on the steps of Hurley's saloon but Mrs. Annie Bow on being asked by Mr. Ray, who was boarding with Hurley, where Morris was burt, replied thatit was in the dining room, where they were then sitting. The defense insists that Russell Bow hit Morris while in the house. There was blood on the inside of the door frame and some of the witnesses say that Morris was not in the house again after he and Russell had the scuiffe. So far the defense has introduced teatimony mainly tending to prove an alith, showing that the accused was at Charlie Seabright's when the fight occurred.
